

Forest Journey

Conserving Biodiversity in Productive Landscapes

The Forest Journey explores the growing demands put on forests, such as biodiversity conservation, climate change mitigation and income generation and illustrates how rights based approaches to managing forested landscapes offer best case scenarios. Recognizing that governance issues are at the heart of many forest management problems, the Forest Journey looks at balancing forest productivity with changing agricultural demands, how proposals to exploit forests for sequestering and storing carbon might work for forest communities and how we can help these same communities adapt to climate change. The tools used to capture peoples' hopes for improving their landscapes and monitoring changes are highlighted and the role markets play in meeting local needs whilst sustaining biodiversity are assessed.

We hope that the Forest Journey provides new ideas and new ways of looking at old ideas that can be taken back to the landscapes in which the IUCN membership works. We look forward to travelling with you on the Forest Journey and meeting you at the Forest Pavilion.

Forest Pavilion

The Forest Pavilion has been designed in structure and content to offer a networking and showcasing venue for our forest members and partners.

Each morning, a forest briefing will be held to preview the forest related events for that day. We are also very interested in learning more about our forest members and those interested in becoming forest members. We look forward to meeting you at our Members Corner in the Forest Pavilion, where we can match you with a member of our team whose work, geographic expertise and language skills are similar to yours. By discussing our mutual priorities, we can forge a renewed and closer working relationship over the next four years.
